Tobolt, 96 Wn. App. 221, 228, 979 P.2d 933 (1999). But it did not discuss Stranahan, an earlier opinion that considered a claim of mistaken belief that police had a search warrant. In State v. Randolph, the court concluded that a search warrant had been obtained. 34 Wn. App. 708, 710, 637 P.2d 793 (1981). It noted that the officer stated, “[T]he facts in support of a search warrant were discussed with the defendant.” Id. at 711. The court noted that although the defendant was not comfortable with the officers, he had not objected to the search. Id. The court did not address whether the statements in the search warrant application constituted a statement of probable cause. In State v. Farrar, an officer took a swab of the defendant’s saliva from her tooth. 136 Wn.2d 210, 220, 961 P.2d 358 (1998). After obtaining the swab, the officer told the defendant that he was a “police officer.” Id. The officer also told the defendant that she would have to go to jail. Id. The court determined that this amounted to “an implied threat,” and concluded that the swab was taken pursuant to a search warrant. Id. The court did 94e9d1d2d9
